VI. Synopsis of current and past research, academic and professional interests

Keywords: Spatial, Land-Use & Landscape Planning, Governance and Modelling; Land-Use and Landscape Sustainability, Multi-Functionality and Resilience; Spatial & Scalar Miss-Matches; Epistemology and History of Geography, Spatial Planning & Environmental Sciences.

I have an inter-disciplinary educational background in geography, spatial analysis, earth system sciences and land-use and landscape planning. Presently, the main objective of my research is on developing novel methods, models and ideas that can potentially contribute to tackling a wide range of environmental challenges around land use and landscape change, with a special focus on rural regions and communities. To do this I draw on concepts, paradigms and models from physical and environmental geography, earth system sciences and landscape ecology to design and test innovative planning, management and governance models and tools. In addition to the former, I am also interested in exploring the contributions of environmental geography and planning to the various contemporary paradigms and models aimed at unravelling the complexity of human-nature relationships, including; ecosystem and landscape framework/services, land use science, resilience and systems theories and social-ecological systems. Additionally, and prior to embarking on tertiary education I worked in farm management and surveying, secondary level teaching and education, international cooperation and agricultural and environmental analysis and assessment.
